UTAHNS RODE WITH PEACHES IN HORSE-AND-BUGGY ERA

You didn't have to have automobiles to get around in the old days. Horses and buggies furnished the transportation for many special occasions. But the women were not a bit "stuck up," as the saying went.

They were not above riding to town on load of potatoes or fruit. In this old picture it happened to be peaches that were going to town. Some of the women went along for the ride and to do a little shopping.

Those were top peaches too; still are. Now shipped all over the country, honored with a Utah festival each year. Brigham City Peach day grew out of something like this. The picture shows a scene at the William Horsley & Sons packing house in Brigham City. Here the fruit was packed for shipment.

Today the district is nationally famous for the quality of its peaches and the quantity produced. Mode and manner of shipment have changed a lot since this old photograph was taken. Stricter grading and fancy packages have entered the picture. Motor vehicles handle the transportation.

The photograph was submitted by Mrs. A. D. Harding, 506 South Second East, Brigham City.
